Climate Change Niki J.P. Alford, 2022-05-09 This book provides a comprehensive overview of issues related to climate change in the Pacific and will be an invaluable reference for those working in this important field. Climate change represents humanity's greatest threat. The vastness of the Pacific means that no two experiences are the same. This edited volume identifies research that highlights the local impact of climate change on the islands and coastlines of the Pacific. The authors use current research to document climate change via contextually informed studies that engage with local cultures, histories, knowledges, and communities. The transdisciplinary nature and the combination of both academic and non-academic writing makes this book an accessible and important contribution to the field. Routledge Handbook of Ecosystem Services Marion Potschin, Roy Haines-Young, Robert Fish, R. Kerry Turner, 2016-01-22 The idea that nature provides services to people is one of the most powerful concepts to have emerged over the last two decades. It is shaping our understanding of the role that biodiverse ecosystems play in the environment and their benefits for humankind. As a result, there is a growing interest in operational and methodological issues surrounding ecosystem services amongst environmental managers, and many institutions are now developing teaching programmes to equip the next generation with the skills needed to apply the concepts more effectively. This handbook provides a comprehensive reference text on ecosystem services, integrating natural and social science, including economics. Collectively, the chapters written by the world's leading authorities demonstrate the importance of biodiversity for people, policy, and practice. They also show how the value of ecosystems to society can be expressed in monetary and non-monetary terms so that the environment can be better taken into account in decision-making. The significance of the ecosystem service paradigm is that it helps us redefine and better communicate the relationships between people and nature. It is shown how these are essential to resolving challenges such as sustainable development and poverty reduction and the creation of a green economy in developing and developed world contexts. Climate Change and Gendered Livelihoods in Bangladesh Sajal Roy, 2021-11-07 Globally, climate-induced disasters have been impacting marginalised communities' lives, livelihoods, and gendered relations. This book explores the effects of Cyclone Aila as a result of climate change in 2009 on the rural livelihoods and gendered relations of two ethnically distinct forest communities: Munda, an indigenous group, and Shora, a Muslim group dwelling near the Sundarbans Forest in Bangladesh. Examining the cyclone's medium to long-term impacts on livelihoods and comparative aspects of gendered relations between these two contrasting communities, this book addresses a gap in current critical development studies. It adopts an ethnographic research design and analyses the alterations to livelihood activities and reconfiguration of gender relations within the Munda and Shora communities since 2009. The study primarily contends that post-Aila livelihoods and gendered relations have been substantially transformed in both communities, making the case that the improvement of local infrastructure as an important part of the geographical location has noticeably progressed the living conditions and livelihoods of some members of the Munda and Shora communities. Connecting climate-induced changes with the construction and alteration of gendered livelihood patterns the book will be of interest to a wide range of academics in the fields of Asian Studies Sociology of Environment Social Anthropology Human Geography Gender and Cultural Studies Human Geography Disaster Management and Forestry and Environmental Science The Indian Journal of Agricultural Economics ,1946 Vols include Proceedings of the conference of the Indian Society of Agricultural Economics Climate Change, Agriculture and Rural Livelihoods in Developing Countries Keshav Lall Maharjan,Niraj Prakash Joshi,2013-05-13 This book is about climate change and its relation to agriculture and rural livelihoods It starts by providing a basic understanding of climate change science followed by the relation of climate change to agriculture the impact of which is discussed based on the particular impact of climate change on plant and animal physiology The book further discusses the inclusion of the agriculture sector in various international climate change negotiations It also reviews the cost and opportunities for agricultural projects through international climate change regimes specifically the Clean Development Mechanism under the Kyoto Protocol With this background the book finally proceeds to an explanation of the methodologies used to assess the impact of climate change on agriculture and empirically discusses its impact on agriculture and rural livelihoods in Nepal Climate Change and Society Fátima Alves ,Luísa Schmidt,2022-11-01 Economic and Political Weekly ,1994-04 World Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology Abstracts ,1994 Rural Commercial Capital Barbara Harriss-White,2008 Agricultural performance is influenced by agricultural commodity markets However the importance of these markets has largely been ignored by agricultural policymakers and mainstream economists This pioneering study covering both the pre and the post liberalization periods and West Bengal s transformation from a seriously deficit to a surplus state conceives of the post harvest sector as a system of markets It shows how while West Bengal enjoyed the results of a reformed agrarian system the market system remained unreformed until recently The book sheds light on the role and importance of distribution and commodity markets in shaping and spreading the benefits of higher productivity across society An original analysis of the regulation of markets by institutions of collective action and social identity as well as by the state the book discusses a regulatory policy that could be adopted by any government irrespective of its ideology Barbara Harriss White s quarter century of field work in West Bengal has yielded new insights into the political economy where ethno cultural networks and informal finance have led to a polarization of agro commercial power on the one hand and a proliferation of livelihoods for small traders in the post harvest market system on the other Challenging many of the claims of orthodox political economy this well researched volume offers a new interpretation of rural development over three decades of communist rule Food Systems and the Human Environment in Eastern India: Food insecurity, climate variability and community perceptions Boudhayan Chattopadhyay,1991 Development of Nutritional Science in India B.
