8. Research and Evaluation

Research is a guidance function where the counselor develops and implements research plans that would generate empirical data about students and student life that could be used to inform policy and decision-making in the school, especially on matters relevant to student welfare and development, and to inform the direction and suitability of the various guidance services, as well as of the other student services and programs provided.

Evaluation, on the other hand, is a guidance function where the counselor develop and implement assessment and evaluation plans that would provide soft and hard data on the quality, results, and impact of the various student services and programs. Evaluation data can be used as basis for enhancement of existing programs and development of new programs.
