The Race Variable Jay S. Kaufman, 2025-12-09 From social science and biomedical research to government and media reporting statistics on racial and ethnic disparities are everywhere The numbers we typically encounter however are not straightforward comparisons Researchers analyze data using adjustments such as regression models that are intended to address bias and confounding factors Yet many common statistical practices produce misleading results and some have flawed assumptions that inadvertently misrepresent the inequalities between groups Jay S Kaufman offers a clear and accessible guide to understanding the use and abuse of statistics on racial and ethnic disparities Examining dozens of real world examples spanning medicine economics education and criminal justice he shows how typical statistical practices no matter how well intentioned have obscured the realities of injustice with significant consequences for public policy Kaufman considers how to select and apply statistical adjustments responsibly and systematically and he proposes ways to improve the explanation and analysis of racial and ethnic inequalities Written for readers without a background in statistics this book provides an essential introduction to quantitative reasoning in terms of

The Injustice of Noah's Curse Justin Michael Reed,Associate Professor of Old Testament and the Hebrew Bible Justin Michael Reed,2025-12-02 This book provides a new literary interpretation of Noah's curse as unjust Most interpreters acknowledge that in the context of Genesis 9:18-29 Noah's curse of Canaan seems to be an overreaction and off target but almost all readers including ideologically motivated interpreters and modern biblical scholars with no desire to weaponize the curse presume that a good interpretation should overcome the initial reaction that Noah's curse seems unjust This book argues the opposite Reading through the lens of interest convergence from critical race theory and performative utterances from speech act theory this book proposes that intertextual connections between Genesis 9:18-29 and the stories in Genesis 2:3 show Noah and his actions as an ironic recurrence of the Adam and Eve narrative and the injustice of Noah's curse serves as a crucial element in this ironic depiction and the primeval history as a whole Provided by publisher
